

Editorial

Last night's resignation of two SEC members and the pending resignation of a third, all as a result of academic difficulties, has brought to the surface a problematic situation which has worsened steadily in recent years.

This is the situation of below-average students, unrestricted by clearly-defined university regulations, becoming overactive in extra-curricular activities to the detriment of their studies. Time after time we have seen campus leaders fail out of university or be forced to resign their extra-curricular posts to salvage their academic lives at the last possible moment.

Such a situation is not confined to McGill. Only yesterday came word that the president of the University of Manitoba Students Society has failed out of college for the second time, resulting in an unprecedented by-election for the Manitoba students' presidency.

Nevertheless, the majority of United States universities and some in Canada have taken precautions to avoid the problem of academic difficulties among activity men and women. These precautions have taken the form of well-defined academic standards which must be met before a student may participate actively in student activities.

Dr. James last night stated there exists at McGill a long-standing regulation, couched in general terms, that no student not "in good academic standing with the University" may participate in intercollegiate athletics or hold major extra-curricular posts. SEC president Smith says that if any such minimum academic standard exists at McGill, it has never, to his knowledge, been made known to the Students' Council.

We heartily endorse the SEC motion approving the principle of establishing such a standard for McGill. Moreover, we hope the committee appointed to investigate the problem and to recommend a minimum standard will face its task with foresight and proceed in a serious manner.

Aware as we are of the many problems which will confront the committee, we suggest it proceed with a view to requiring that all aspirants to major extra-curricular posts have a second class average. We're glad this student activity bubble has finally burst. We look forward to adequate reform.

Professors' Raft Floundering - Only One Can Survive

The annual Professor's Raft sails this Wednesday, September 28 at 8:30 in the Union Ballroom. The Raft is sponsored by the Freshman Reception Committee and offers the frosh a chance to meet a few of their professors. It also serves the purpose of proving to freshmen that their professors are really human after all mentioned a spokesman.

The hypothetical situation is that there is one professor from each faculty aboard a raft, and only one can survive. The representative of each faculty tries to persuade the audience that the world needs him and not his colleagues.

Representing Science will be Professor Holcombe; Arts, Professor Callard; Engineering, Professor Harris; and Commerce, Professor Pugsley. The captain of the raft and chairman will be Professor Mallory of the Political Science Department.

ARGUMENTS

In past voyages, Science has claimed to hold the key to the modern world, while Engineering has claimed its superiority lies in the fact that it can get things done. Commerce argues that money alone counts in the Western World, while Arts counters with the fact that it alone can make life really worthwhile for the human race. In past years the raft has gone down with no survivors.

After the debate, the drenched professors meet with those present for an informal get-together.

If You Vote For Me...

No, Mayor Sarto Fournier is not soliciting votes. He is merely adding his words of encouragement to McGill's student canvassers for Red Feather.

Two members of the Students Executive Council last night resigned their posts, and another resignation is expected today.

The defections were blamed on academic failures on the part of the students involved, according to Students' Society president Stuart Smith, who released the announcement at last night's marathon SEC meeting.

The resignations of Cameron Grout, Chairman of the S.A.C., B.Sc.3, and Sol Polatshek, Engineering representative, B. Eng. Civ. 4 were accepted by Council. Ed Bierbrier, Commerce representative, B. Com. 3 had not yet come to a decision and it was stated his answer would be tendered to the Chairman today. All three students will be repeating their year.

Following this report, Council questioned whether there were any stated minimum academic requirements for responsible campus posts in use at the present time.

NO PROVISIONS

"There are no provisions for academic requirements in the constitution of the Students' Society. However, precedent records that a resignation is usually in line in such cases," answered Chairman Smith.

In answer to a query on senate statements, Smith stated, "To my knowledge there is no senate ruling in such matters. If there is such a rule, it has never been brought to the attention of the S.E.C."

To cope with the academic problems, Smith brought up the recommendation that the S.E.C. institute minimum academic requirements for persons holding positions on major or responsible committees on campus.

In the past, student activities have taken considerable toll on those who have not maintained sufficient control over their extra-curricular activities. "It is about time we did something official about the situation," Smith remarked.

AUTONOMOUS GROUP

It is possible that, in view of the situation, the university might take some action concerning academic standings. However, we should remember that we are an autonomous group and not be stampeded into taking unconsidered action through fear of Senate ruling.

Vita Land, President of the Women's Union stated that the Executive of the Women's Union is considering an amendment to their electoral by-law stating that all applicants for executive positions must be academically clear.

Marion Macdougall, President of the Women's Athletic Association added that in previous years the constitution of this body had included a clause ruling out the participation of conditioned students in intercollegiate team activities or executive membership. This year, however, conditioned students will be allowed to play on intercollegiate teams although executive members must still be academically clear.

COMMITTEE SET UP

Following discussion, the S.E.C. approved a motion stating "Council favours a minimum academic requirement for candidates seeking campus positions and further decides to set up a committee of three to investigate a feasible academic requirement".

Bob Carswell, B. Cl. 1, Irwin Cotler, B. A. 4, and Murray Greenwood, B. Cl. 3 were appointed to the committee and will report to the Council at the next meeting.

While these developments were exploding on the McGill scene, a Canadian University Press wire story from Winnipeg announced an unprecedented Manitoba campus election to replace Student Union president Lindley Abdullah who failed his year. The by-election, scheduled for October 3, will require amendment of the Manitoba constitution, which provides for spring voting only.

Abdullah, elected president last spring, was forced to resign two weeks ago because he failed supplemental this summer.

$5,392 Gained For Red Feather

by BILL HERSH

McGill's students collected $5,392 in a blitz campaign which took them to more than 30,000 Montreal homes. Although the figure was slightly below the aspirations of the students, it exceeded by 66% the expectations of Red Feather officials.

The blitz commenced at 5:30 last night with a mass rally of about 100 students on the Lower Campus. The canvassers, some wearing raincoats under the light drizzle, were divided up into four "colour groups", each made up of an equal number of males and females. To the music provided by the sound-truck each group engaged in a giant "Paul Jones" culminating with each boy finding a blitz partner.

Ted Fisher, Red Feather college chairman, began the brief ceremony by introducing Dr. F. Cyril James. The Principal commented on the sense of responsibility these volunteer campaigners possess and hoped their spirit would not be dampened by the unfavourable weather. He then introduced Mr. Howard Ross, member of McGill's Board of Governors, and Red Feather's General Chairman.

OBJECTIVE

Mr. Ross stated that this year's objective is $1,930,000, eighty thousand more than was collected last year. He explained that the amount amassed always comes close to the objective but never reaches it. He hoped that this season the goal would be reached so that nobody would be denied aid because of a lack of contributions. "A large number of small subscriptions add up to a very worthwhile sum," he concluded.

Mayor O'Reilly of Verdun, third speaker welcomed all canvassers to his city and commented that he is very grateful to charitable organizations for the services they rendered him in his youth. After inviting all present to attend his City Council Meeting last night, he expressed his confidence that the blitz would be a great triumph. "Anything students undertake usually turns out to be a big success".

His Worship, the Mayor of Montreal Sarto Fournier praised the students for their efforts. "What you are about to undertake will make you a living symbol of all that is nice and great in our civilization. I hope that behind every door you will find an open purse and an open heart."

Mayor Fournier extended an invitation to all canvassers to attend the party in the Chalet a top Mount Royal, after the blitz. There, he said, they could be officially thanked by all those in charge of the campaign.

NEW NFCUS UNITY

A number of encouraging elements have emerged from last week's Halifax conference of the National Federation of Canadian University Students. McGill's representation at the conference played a prominent role in bringing about this pleasing situation.

Unlike past NFCUS conferences, the most recent one ended on a genuine note of national unity. Delegates from every section of Canada revealed a willingness to work together harmoniously towards solving the problems of Canadian University students.

The Conference agreed Canadian students should consider themselves as a privileged sector of society owing a responsibility to those of their contemporaries unable to experience a university education. The NFCUS delegates jointly undertook to contribute in any way possible to meet this responsibility to society.

The NFCUS delegates then became positive by passing a resolution for 10,000 university scholarships of $600 each for students unable to attend university owing to financial need. This resolution was proposed and its wrinkles ironed out by McGill delegates attending the Conference.

Coming as it does at the end of the year in which the philosophy of education in this province has been completely reconsidered, this new NFCUS unity of purpose is particularly significant for students or prospective students in Quebec. It is noteworthy that the French-Canadian universities agreed to the scholarship proposals when the motion made it clear the money was to be raised at all levels of government rather than solely by the Federal Government.

Basic to the French Canadian universities' agreement was the clause that all scholarship money be distributed through channels approved by the Provincial Government.

It is hoped the spirit of the Halifax Conference will spread among university students across Canada. It is hoped further, members of student bodies will follow the mature lead of their NFCUS representatives in contemplating their role in society. A scholarship program of such magnitude as the one proposed is of vital concern to Canadian university students at large. The basic need for education in this country cannot be denied and we are happy to see student leaders finally uniting to meet this need.

Hail Fraternities

Criticism of McGill fraternities has not been rare on these pages.

Justified as it often was, the constructive attack gave some students the unwarranted idea that we consider fraternal groups organizations of evil incarnate. This of course is not the case.

Weeding out unhappy aspects of a particular phenomenon and hauling them under the fire of constructive criticism is not at all equivalent to blatantly condemning the phenomenon itself.

By the same token, there is a time and a place for compliments. Yesterday evening's demonstration of community responsibility by McGill fraternities and sororities seems to us worthy of praise.

The undergraduate blitz door-to-door canvass for the Red Feather Campaign was a fine illustration of student and, specifically, fraternity willingness to fulfill a valuable role outside the university community.

For two months, leaders of the Pan-Hellenic Society and the Inter-Fraternity Council worked together with Red Feather officials to organize some 700 canvassers to take part in the opening night activities of the campaign.

The canvass produced a valuable contribution to the Red Feather goal of $1,930,000. Furthermore, it helped represent McGill students in a most favorable light. We congratulate the Pan-Hellenic Society and The I. F. C. on a job well done.

Mirror of World Opinion

How Do You Prefer To Die?

Recently the (U.S.) Army Chemical Corps staged a series of lectures and demonstrations for newsmen at Dugway Proving Ground in Utah, aimed at removing prejudices against chemical and biological warfare — "CW" and "BW" in military terminology. Ten years ago, the spokesman admitted, there was a stigma attached to CW and BW, but he added, "there has been a lot of progress in this field". As an example, he cited the nerve gas "GB" (for German Type B) which, according to the correspondent of the New York Herald Tribune, "induces death in a matter of minutes after the victim first suffers a chest-tightening, salivation and respiration, vomiting, pin-pointing of the eyes, convulsions and finally death from a filling of the lungs with fluid. Despite these reactions, the Chemical Corps scientists said, death is painless".

To prove it, the Chemical Corps fired GB shells at goats and pigeons. Within a minute and a half, all the nearby goats and pigeons had "gone into a few quick convulsions, rolled over and died." One goat was masked "and appeared to thrive until, in his excitement, he tore the tube on his gas mask free, inhaled the GB and died in two minutes". The Army, it seems, gives a regular CBR (chemical, biological, radiological) Weapons Orientation Course weekly to selected visitors at Dugway. Col. Joseph C. Prentice, the course director, says, "I'm an enthusiast over biological and chemical warfare, I think it's great stuff. It's more humane than anything else we've got." His enthusiasm will be shared by many, even if they are not among the selected visitors who can see for themselves.

Saskatchewan Rep. Unanimously Elected NFCUS '60 President

Bruce Rawson of the University of Saskatchewan was unanimously elected president of the National Federation of Canadian University Students early September, at its 24th annual congress. Challenging the delegates in his acceptance speech, he told them that the congress was the place to legislate and plan but, "When you leave, do so with a firm resolve to fight with all the dynamic energy at your disposal to obtain the many goals of our Federation."

Rawson, who is now past-president of the western region, warned them that, "Laziness can make the most enlightened legislation sterile."

In elections for other positions on the NFCUS executive outgoing president Jacques Gerin of Montreal was elected international affairs vice-president; Brian Fleming of Dalhousie was elected national affairs vice-president, and Russell Brink of UBC, former national affairs vice-president was chosen for the new post of vice-president for educational affairs.

EXECUTIVE

The remainder of the executive is composed of the regional presidents who are: Atlantic, Peter Green, last year's Atlantic regional vice-president; Quebec, Gilles Blais, of Laval, Marc Sommerville, of Toronto; Western, Dale Smith of Manitoba.

To help its members know more about the problems, and activities of their fellow students a NFCUS handbook will be published, a study of the underdevelopment of academic potential of university students will be made, and the national secretariat will take measures to publicize and alleviate the student residence shortage.

Blood Drive Sets Higher Objective

Chairman Sammy Gewurz has announced that the objective of the Blood Drive this year is 3000 pints. This sets the drive's sights 300 pints higher than last year. Last year's objective was not reached. Although last year's objective was not reached 2519 pints of blood were received. Gewurz added that one of the most valuable ways a student could help the Red Cross was by donating a pint of his own blood.

At the same time he released the names of his vice-chairmen Marvin Wexler, Vivian Paskal and Gord Eberts.

The drive will be held October 12-19 in the Union Ballroom. All those students who are interested in helping others, please contact Vivian Paskal, RI. 44745.

Grad Society President Adds His Welcome Too

It is the hope of all our members at the Graduate Society of McGill that you will have a most successful and rewarding year at our old University. The permanent staff at Martlet House, 3618 University Street is anxious to be of assistance to student organizations wherever possible.

Close to half of the University's 31,000 graduates are listed as active members of the Society. One of our main functions is to provide a medium whereby McGill men and women can maintain their contact with the University and with each other. The effectiveness of our efforts can be seen in the fact that there are 56 branches of the Society in Canada, the United States, and other parts of the world. The branches hold regular meetings during the year at which time they are brought up to date with developments at McGill.

Interest in McGill runs high among our graduates. This is well illustrated in the fact that each year graduates subscribe over a quarter of a million dollars to the Alma Mater Fund, which is turned over to the University to use as it sees fit.

In addition to administering the annual Alma Mater Fund program, the headquarters staff has responsibility for publishing the quarterly magazine, "The McGill

Best wishes to you all.

Sports View Point

The Coffin Corner

By JIM GRANT

There is a serious problem of a lack of interest in Intercollegiate Athletics at McGill. Unfortunately, this problem is evidently among the graduates and general public as well as the student body. Although repeated attempts have been made by the Athletic department to stimulate interest, the crowds still go home in a taxi.

If the students do not attend the games it is difficult to justify the existence of major Intercollegiate teams. The figures are unavailable, but a conservative estimate would place the cost of the major intercollegiate athletic programme at $50,000. This programme includes football, hockey, basketball, and other sports for which the maintenance costs are out of proportion with the number of participants.

FINANCIAL SITUATION

In most cases, maintaining major teams can be justified from the financial point of view. Some American universities run their athletic program on the receipts from the football games. However, this situation does not exist at McGill. The numbers of graduates and general public that attend the games is negligible and there is no admittance charge for students. Subsidization by the university and the continuing presence of the Montreal Alouettes in Molson Stadium have eased the financial pressure. The subsidies and the lucrative stadium rental have permitted a solving of the problem, and although the athletic revenue has declined so much as to become almost non-existent, the cost of maintaining the athletic plans has not become prohibitive. Therefore, from the financial viewpoint it has not as yet become necessary, to justify the spending of $50,000 on approximately 100 athletes.

Even if the major teams were operating at an unsubsidized deficit, their existence might be justified by the fact that they created tradition and school spirit. Unfortunately, there is no traditional rivalry between McGill and any other member of the Intercollegiate union and, at the present time, athletic teams are incapable of affecting school spirit. Perhaps this statement should not include a winning team, but it is difficult to judge as winners have been rather infrequent at McGill.

ESPRIT DE CORPS

Any possible esprit-de-corps of cohesive school spirit is incompatible with the cosmopolitan character of the university. Because of the nature and situation of the campus it is difficult to cultivate the atmosphere that is found in more self contained colleges. The students of McGill who are on the 9-to-5 shift are unable, somehow, to fit extracurricular activities into their crowded schedules. Those who do participate are more influenced by the merry-go-round of campus social activities than by people jumping up and down at pep-rallies. Generally, most students do things because other students do them and attending sporting events is not considered the thing to do at McGill. Thus, at this time, the possibility of McGill teams promoting school spirit is rather remote.

Prospects Brighter For Track & Rugger Clubs

The coming Fall track season is being greeted with mixed emotion by coach Howie Ryan. The team is riding high on the crest of last year's intercollegiate victory wave but looming close is the trough which the Redmen might plunge into as a result of team losses and injury.

Gone from the fold is Paul Brady, a very promising weight man (discus and shotput) who played against exams and lost. Bob Land, pole vaulter par excellence and veteran 880 man Charley Hudson have also departed from the scene.

These three omissions are not the worst of the story. Injuries are plaguing the once healthy squad. Dan Ellis, the dependable sprinter, was laid low for part of the training season with a virus infection. Morris Limonchik, Canadian Intercollegiate discus and shotput champion has reported with a pulled shoulder muscle.

On other fronts, the picture is considerably brighter. This year's Freshman crop has Ryan singing all kinds of praises to the Lord. Jim Dreisinger is expected to bolster the distance squad. Allan Small is highly touted as a weight man, javolin and jumping specialist. Dave Prebble will be running the 880 and one mile events.

Sprinting has been a thorn in the side of the team for several seasons. The coming crop seems to bring some relief. The likes of Colin Adair, Peter Rudner and Anthony Libert have coach Ryan looking up. Van Esselstyn will round out this promising Frosh group.

After all is said and done the team will still be depending on the standouts who fought their way to the championship last year. Hopes are high for the return of Bob Hyde (440), Ed Hume (hurdles), Bill Gairdner (hurdles) and Stan Barkovsky (dist.). Of course, the "big" nome in McGill track is Pete Adams. Adams, the intercollegiate cross-country champion has quite an international reputation which seems to add a pleasing final touch to the Red and White roster.

RUGGER

Practices will be held every night this week as the rugger squad prepares for its first game, less than two weeks away. Many of last year's players will be returning to join fifteen new men who start their second week of training today. Anyone wishing to try out for the teams should appear on the Upper Field at 5.00 or contact Howie Ryan at the Athletic Office for further information.

McGill will again enter a team in the Montreal Senior City League, and will play its first game on October 8. On October 15, the first of a two game series will be held in Toronto to try to regain the Intercollegiate Championship, which Varsity Blues won by a narrow margin last year to break a nine year Redmen reign. Coach Covo also hopes to enter a team into the Intermediate City League Strong enough to recover the Second Cup, which McGill won two years ago.

McGill has lost some strong players through graduation, notably Sass Khazzman and captain Bon Van Ingen. However, several of the new men show promise and should be an asset to the team. Hopes are especially high that a former Irish and English International team member, Tom Reid, who is now studying at McGill, will be able to play against Varsity.
